

Notice of Data Security Incident

Lamb, Little & Co. has become aware of a data security incident that may have resulted in the inadvertent exposure of clients' personal information. Although at this time there is no evidence that client information was actually accessed or viewed, or any indication of anyone's information being misused, Lamb, Little & Co. has taken steps to notify anyone who may have been affected by this incident, including sending letters to anyone whose information may have been exposed.

On April 2, 2020, we identified certain individuals whose information was contained in an email account that may have been accessed by unknown, unauthorized third party. After identifying potentially suspicious activity, our IT staff immediately began an investigation and engaged computer forensic experts to determine if any information was impacted. After examining the accounts, the investigation determined that information, possibly including Social Security numbers, driver's license numbers, and limited medical information in a small number of cases, may have been contained in an impacted e-mail account.

While there is no indication that an unauthorized party accessed or viewed client information or evidence of customer information being misused, Lamb, Little & Co. remains committed to protecting our clients' information and has taken steps to prevent a similar event from occurring in the future, including reviewing and revising its information security policies and procedures. Letters sent to potentially impacted individuals include additional information about what occurred and a toll-free number where customers can learn more about the incident. The call center is available Monday through Friday between 8:00 AM to 8:00 PM Central at 800-939-4170.

The privacy and security of our customer information is a top priority for Lamb, Little & Co., which deeply regrets any inconvenience or concern this incident may cause.
